Location and lifestyle

The Armenian Quarter is in central Bucharest and has a quiet character, with streets lined by villas with gardens and Art Deco blocks. The quarter's streets include Armenească, Spătarului, Donici, Toamnei, Corbeni, Popa Rusu and Franzelarilor.

Strada Armenească is documented since the 17th century, and the Armenian community, prosperous and well established over time, gave the area its identity. The Armenian Church was built between 1911 and 1915 and is a listed historic monument. Casa Melik, built in 1822, is regarded as the oldest surviving residential house in the city and houses the Theodor Pallady Art Museum. The Armenian complex also includes the Dudian Museum, the Archdiocese and the Armenian Cultural Center.

The Strada Armenească Festival, held since 2013, started in the quarter itself and drew over 35,000 participants at its 2026 edition. Central Bucharest is served by metro line M2, which links Piața Romană and Universitate stations along the city's central axis.

For a company, the address combines an ultracentral position with a quiet setting and a distinct identity. For living, it offers access to the city centre in a quarter of historic character.
